George Wharton Pepper, Philadelphia Lawyer, Is Named Successor to Penrose

Will Be Candidate in November for Election for Rest of Term.

NOT UNKNOWN IN SENATE

Attracted Much Attention During War. By Opposition to League of Nations. Co-sponsor of Civil Liberties and Has Record as an Athlete.

By Associated Press
PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 9.—George Wharton Pepper, Philadelphia lawyer, was named today by Governor Sproul to succeed the late Senator Penrose.

Under the law, the appointment stands until a successor is selected at the November election for the remainder of the term of the late senator, which will expire in 1927.

Governor Sproul, in announcing the appointment, said that in order that there may be a full understanding of the situation he desired to say that he expected Mr. Pepper to be a candidate to fill the unexpired term of the late Senator Boies Penrose.

Upon being officially notified of his appointment Mr. Pepper issued the following statement:

"The governor of Pennsylvania has honored me by tendering to me the office of United States senator. I have accepted the tender and I am prepared to enter upon the discharge of my duties as soon as the formalities of qualification have been completed with any restriction, expressed or implied, upon my freedom of choice respecting my term of service. If I am nominated and elected to serve out the term for which Senator Penrose was chosen it is my intention to do so."

George Wharton Pepper is not unknown to many members of the Senate. During the time the Versailles Treaty was under consideration, Mr. Pepper attracted wide attention by opposing the ratification of the League of Nations in joint debate on the platform with Senator Hiram Bingham of Nebraska in this city and with Senator Pomereoy of Ohio in Indianapolis.

Like Boies Penrose, Mr. Pepper comes from an old Philadelphia family. He is 55 years old. He was educated in private schools and was graduated in 1887 from the University of Pennsylvania, of which he is now a trustee and from the law department two years later. He has had wide experience in the civil practice of law.

He now practices law in Philadelphia, but up to this time has declined all offers of a judicial public office. During the World War he was a member of the Council of National Defense of the Pennsylvania Public Safety Committee and the commission to revise the state constitution.

Mr. Pepper is a prominent member of the Episcopal Church and expert on the canonical law of the denomination. In his university days, Mr. Pepper was a hammer thrower on the Pennsylvania track team and also played football. He attended the University of Pennsylvania and also played football. LAST FATALITY IN DISPUTE

When Determined, Monument Will Be Erected on Spot Where Unfortunate Soldier Died.

When was the last man killed in the war? This is the latest question asked by the French Herald Journal, Renaissance. It promises to be taken up seriously by the allied nations, each of which has hitherto considered that the honor belonged to it. The British declare that a few minutes before eleven o'clock on the morning of the armistice a column of machine gunners in the British army received a stray bullet, but it is doubtful whether this bullet came from a German sniper or from a party of moppers up. At any rate, the British case is considered outlashed. Veterans' associations in allied countries are being asked to send in corroborated details of incidents likely to aid in solving the problem, which the Renaissance assures its readers is just as important as the identity of the last man killed in the war. The latter honor, of course, belonging to the French soldier who crossed the German frontier without knowing war had been declared and was shot during an altercation with a German customs agent and a squad of German infantry. Once the identity of the last man killed in the war is established, a monument will be raised to commemorate the fatality and the soldier who lost his life at the moment of victory.

Serious Woman Says Tanline Has Freed Her of Every Trace of Rheumatism.

"I just think Tanline is the greatest medicine on earth, for it has rid me entirely of an awful case of rheumatism of five or six years' standing when nothing else would even so much as help me," said Mrs. Susan Drisk, 934 Acker avenue, Scranton, Pa.

"Why, I was in such bad condition I limped like a cripple. My arms ached and pained me, my fingers were stiff and sore, my back hurt dreadfully, and I was in such misery that many times I had to stop my housework and lie down. I never felt like eating anything, and after meals I bloated so terribly with gas that I could hardly breathe, and became so nauseated I could scarcely retain a thing I had eaten. I could get very little sleep, and mornings it was all I could do to get out of bed."

"But almost as soon as I started taking Tanline I commenced improving in every way. It's really astonishing, but it's a fact, five bottles of this medicine have rid me of my troubles completely. I relish all my meals, even the ones I agree with me perfectly, and I never have an ache or pain of any kind. I sleep like a child, my housework is easy for me, and I couldn't ask to feel better. My gratitude to Tanline is simply unbounded."

Tanline is sold in Conneltsville by the Conneltsville Drug Co., and by the leading druggists everywhere.—Advertisement.

At this time of the year, notes a fashion writer, we are doing our "hottest" by sport clothes of all descriptions. And more especially this season since tweeds and woolens for outer apparel have come so prominently into the limelight.

One used to be accustomed to the remark that ran something like this: "I can't bear to wear woolens even in winter time because they are much too heavy." Then a glimpse of silk clad legs sent a shiver down the observer's spine but the conclusion could only be that this was a human being superior to cold. Now, to look at the same woman clad in thick woolens in winter is something of a shock until one reflects that it is fashion that all which makes the costume wearable or not wearable, and if it is fashion that makes it so, why not wear it? It can be fur in summer and gauze in winter only as

How We Satisfy Our Sweet Tooth.

INTERIOR OF WAREHOUSE SHOWING SUGAR READY TO SHIP—WE EXPORT SOME 500,000 LONG TONS OF REFINED SUGAR ANNUALLY.

By GARRET SMITH

AMERICA is the world's biggest sugar user. Into her tea, coffee, pastries and other foods and drinks goes over 20 per cent of the sugar produced in the entire world. Out of the 17,000,000 long tons manufactured annually by the world at large we Americans consume 4,000,000 tons. And besides that we export somewhere around a half million tons every year.

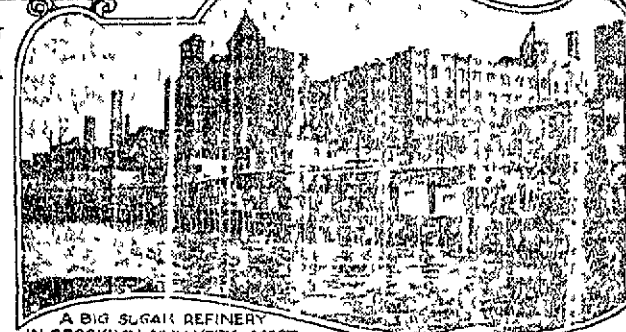

And yet we produce within the boundaries of the United States and our territories considerably less than half the sugar we handle here either for our own use or for shipment to other countries. How does it come about that America, which must import about half the sugar used here, is also a large exporter of that commodity? Where do we get the sugar we can't produce ourselves? Where does the world's sugar come from, anyhow? These are some of the questions that are puzzling the layman who is trying to follow the debate over the proposed sugar tariff just now, in which it is advocated that we adopt the highest rates assessed in over thirty years by making permanent the 60 per cent increase on sugar enacted in the emergency tariff bill.

In the first place the United States and its island possessions is a large sugar producer now ranking third among the nations of the world, although a rather bad third. Cuba, "the Sugar Bowl of the World," as she is called, ranks first with an annual output according to crop estimates of the present year of about 4,000,000 long tons. British India comes second with 3,000,000 tons and the United States in third place with 1,615,000 tons.

The United States is unique as a sugar producer in that we have a large output of both cane and beet sugar, although both together supply only half our consumption. Of the 2,250,000 long tons estimated for this year 1,810,000 is cane sugar and 440,000 is beet sugar.

Climate that will produce surplus cane will not produce sugar beets and vice versa. The tropics and subtropics produce cane sugar in abundance but no beet sugar. North and South America, including the islands, together produce about half the world's annual supply of 12,580,500 long tons of cane sugar annually. Asia falls a little behind with 3,005,000. Africa produces only 560,000 and America 295,000.

How sugar which under Germany's leadership in the sugar market, has declined in value to the point where it is less than 25 per cent of the total supply. There are 4,500,000 long tons of it produced annually in the entire world. Europe and America together produce about half the world's annual supply of 12,580,500 long tons. Other considerable producers of cane sugar are China, India, Java, and the Philippines. Beet sugar is produced in Europe, America, and Asia. The total world supply of sugar is about 12,580,500 long tons annually.

represent an increase of one million and a quarter long tons in the combined output of cane and beet sugar.

Now then with this vast world supply to draw from where does the average American get his sugar? For that matter, where does the rest of the world get its sugar? The answer is, from the United States. The United States is the world's largest exporter of sugar. It exports about 1,000,000 long tons of sugar annually. The United States is the world's largest exporter of sugar. It exports about 1,000,000 long tons of sugar annually.

PHILIPPINE SUGAR STORED READY FOR SHIPMENT HERE—WE USE 70,000 LONG TONS OF PHILIPPINE SUGAR ANNUALLY.

available at a higher price. It would have to be with the other sugar, or the sugar price for a time would be higher.

Last year to be sure we exported only one million tons of sugar. This was only a temporary condition, however. The United States is the world's largest exporter of sugar. It exports about 1,000,000 long tons of sugar annually. The United States is the world's largest exporter of sugar. It exports about 1,000,000 long tons of sugar annually.

Cuba built up a large export business in raw sugar to the English and French refiners. In addition, the American refiners have done a large export business in refined sugar. They were enabled to do this by importing foreign raw sugar, chiefly from Cuba. On this, of course they had to pay a duty, but this duty under our customs laws was refunded to them when the refined product was exported. Thus in practice it became practically a "refining in transit" proposition. The raw sugar produced in Cuba is carried on steamers to the Atlantic coast refiners, unloaded, refined and then exported. At this the refined product is exported on the same steamer or that brings in the raw material.

There are twenty-two large sugar refineries in the United States, located in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Savannah, New Orleans and St. Louis. New York is the big, sugar refining center of the country. This country can refine 1,000,000 tons annually for export purposes without affecting the domestic market, and with this refining capacity it is important that we maintain our export trade. This can be done only with the assistance of Cuba's raw sugar producer. None of our domestic sugar, either raw or refined, is exported, as on account of the tariff it brings a higher price in the domestic market than can be secured abroad.

Altogether we should export of sugar annually to some forty or fifty countries.

The proposed Forney tariff bill will have a far-reaching effect on the sugar market. It will affect the price of sugar and the sugar price will affect the price of sugar. It will affect the price of sugar and the sugar price will affect the price of sugar.

The result, it is confidently predicted, would work great harm to Cuba's sugar industry. It would work great harm to Cuba's sugar industry. It would work great harm to Cuba's sugar industry.
